

Crazy Chicken

by Gerhard Zitzmann of Vienna, Austria

June, 2003

The basis of the CC (Crazy Chicken) plan was the NAFKA-STD Fighter for 2002 (DonnasDog by Bruce Lambert). CC has the same width, but all the other measurements are different. Of special note, the Nose of CC is much bigger. I always use Orcon, but I also believe that other materials will work fine. The bow I used was 0.50 inch carbon rod, and the kite flies well in light to medium winds. If you fly often in light wind, you can make the CC without the battens, but this is my personal preference.

I don't know why, but I wanted my first plan to be called Crazy Chicken. If you build this kite, I'd really be pleased to receive some feedback via e-mail.

I hope you enjoy building and flying the CC, as much as I have,

Gerhard Zitzmann

You can Email me at daniela.zitzmann@tplus.at